The second quarterly conference for Antioch charge will be held in the M. E. church next Saturday evening at 7:30. Let all official members be present. Preaching Sunday morning by the pastor. Sunday evening Rev. M. E. Cady, presiding elder, will preach. All are welcome.

On Thursday of last week occurred the death of Mrs. Andrew Strahan of this place, after a long and painful illness beginning with pneumonia and later heart trouble set in and to this was attributed the cause of her death. She was an old lady and had a large number of friends who will sincerely mourn her loss. For years she with her husband lived on a farm near Hickory until about three years ago they sold their farm and came to make their home in our village. She is survived by her husband and four children, besides numerous other relatives. The funeral was held at the Hickory church on Saturday.

About twenty-five of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fillweber joined in giving them a pleasant surprise at their home Friday evening last in honor of their nineteenth anniversary. Progressive clink was indulged in until a late hour. A bounteous lunch was served after which all departed for their many homes, declaring Mr. and Mrs. Fillweber model entertainers. Those present were: Messrs and Madames A. N. Tiffany, George Webb, Lute Soules, Percy Dibble, Mike Burke, Charles Kelly, B. F. Van Patten, Joseph Turner, Alfred Effinger, Mrs. Dibble King, Mrs. Hoyer, Mrs. Carrier, Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Eminons.

On Sunday last Wm. Allen, Sr., an old resident of this vicinity quietly passed away at his home at Grass Lake at the age of seventy-two years. He had been in poor health for a long time and for the past few months was confined to the house. He has made his home at Grass Lake for many years and was well known and respected throughout the surrounding country. For a long time he has been a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge at this place. The funeral which the Odd Fellows attended in a body was held at the Antioch M. E. church on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Wm. C. Cleworth of Wilmette officiating. Interment at the Antioch Hillside cemetery.

On Sunday last a section foreman found cold in death the form of an unknown man on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad tracks at Lake Forest.

Monday morning the inquest was held in the town hall at Lake Forest by Deputy Coroner Conrad and a verdict returned of accidental death by train that passed at an hour unknown.

Thus there is absolutely no real clue to the man's identity or to the means by which he met death. On his person was found a Chicago street car transfer, a handkerchief and a small American flag. He was about thirty years old, well dressed with the exception of his shoes, and was well built. The body was frozen when found.

This is the second death of the kind that has taken place in Lake Forest or near it.

$12,500 for a Manuscript.

At the sale of the library of the Earl of Cork in London, a French manuscript, described by experts to be one of the finest "Garden" manuscripts ever known, was sold for $12,500.

The same firm purchased King Charles I's prayer book for $1,500.

Got His Prayers Mixed Up.

Parson Hindsdale, of fame in the Berkshires, and sometimes absent-minded, officiated at a wedding in one of the hill towns, and in the prayer, forgetting the occasion, prayed for the surviving relatives. Exchange.

Bees as Weather Prophets.

Bees are excellent weather prophets. There is a common saying that "a bee was never caught in a shower." When rain is impending bees do not go far afield, but ply their labor in the immediate neighborhood of their hive.

ACCIDENT IN MILL

Employee Literally Torn to Pieces at the Threshing Works at Racine

DEATH MUST HAVE BEEN SUDDEN

Body Wound Around Shaft in Mill Room While His Feet are Severed at the Ankle and Drop to the Floor

One of the most frightful accidents that has occurred in a Racine factory for years took place shortly after 9 o'clock Saturday in the mill room of the J. I. Case T. M. Co., causing the instant death of Frederick Felten. He was at work assisting in making repairs to a belt when in some way his clothing became caught in a revolving pulley and his body was drawn upward around the shafting, which was revolving at a high speed. He was dead when the machinery stopped and it is thought that he had no idea what had happened, so quick and unexpectedly did the accident occur.

The accident was a frightful one, and the several hundred employees who crowded around in the mill room were almost stunned, few of them being able to tell what to do in the emergency. Felten had been in the employ of the company several years. He had nothing to do with the shafting or the belts, but when Wm. Corlew was assigned to make the repair of the belt Felten volunteered to assist. Both of the men were standing on a raised plank near the ceiling, and Corlew warned him to be careful. This had hardly been said when Felten's body was carried around the shaft, where it stuck, while his feet were thrown to the floor, having been torn off close to the ankle. Almost every bone in his body was broken and death must have been instantaneous.

The police and Coroner Hoyle were notified of the accident and the ambulance responded. Considerable difficulty was experienced in removing the body from the pulley and shaft, so tightly had it been wound around. A rope was placed about the body and after the belting was cut away it was lowered to the floor and taken to an undertaking room.

The deceased was a trusted employee of the company, having worked about the shop for seventeen years. He was 62 years of age and enjoyed almost perfect health. He leaves a wife, one son and one daughter to mourn his death.

Obituary.

Died of heart disease at the old home at Trevor, Wis., Friday, January 26, 1906, John Longman, age 76 years, 11 months.

John Longman was born in Dorchester, England, Feb. 27, 1829. He was united in marriage to Anna Bascombe, Feb. 27, 1859, and had good-bye to his old home and sailed for America. His first place of residence in the United States was in the town of Salem, where he remained until the time of his death. Nine children were born of this union, one of whom, besides his wife preceded him to the land of rest.

Mr. Longman lived a quiet and unassuming life and has won the kindly regard of all with whom he came in contact. He was widely known throughout this community, where he had many friends. The funeral occurred from the Liberty church Monday at 9 o'clock. A very impressive sermon was delivered by Rev. Chapman, of Bristol. The remains were laid to rest in Liberty cemetery, near his old home.

Forever, dear Father, sweet thy rest, weary with years and worn with pains, farewell, 'til in some happy place we shall behold thy face again.

'Tis ours to miss thee all our years, and tender memories of thee keep; Shine in the Lord to rest, for so He giveth his loved ones sleep.

Weep not, that his toils are o'er; Weep not, that his race is run; God grant we may rest as calmly when our work, like his, is done.

'Till when we yield with gladness, Our Father to him to keep, And rejoice in the sweet assurance, He giveth his loved ones sleep.

Cards of Thanks.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us at the death and funeral of our dear father, John Longman. Particularly are we grateful to the singers, also the Royal Neighbors and to those who contributed flowers.

THE CHILDREN.

We wish to thank our many kind friends and neighbors who kindly assisted us during the sickness and death of our loving wife and mother. Andrew Strahan and family.

Exchange Screenings.

Lent begins February 28th this year and ends April 15.

Mrs. Nation says she divorced her first husband because he refused to give her the kisses and caresses she hungered for. The average man would just as soon tickle the hind leg of a Missouri mule as to tickle Carrie under the chin and call her "lootie wootie."

The Modern Woodmen of America gained 56,000 new members during the year 1905. The members now in good standing are 147,767. The insurance in force is $2,204,043,500. There were paid last year 3,357 death claims. Since 1883 the society has disbursed in death claims $50,000,000.

According to the Telluride (Colo.) Journal two farmers went into a newspaper office at Wellington, Kan., the other day and kicked because the paper didn't print all the news. That night those very two farmers were caught stealing coal from the Santa Fe railroad, and were arrested. The next morning they called, bright and early and asked the editor to suppress the story.

Some New York banks have forbidden their clerks to enter places where intoxicants are sold. This limits the boys to a lunch on sandwiches and cold water in the office, or at least rice and milk in the dairy kitchen. Now, if the bankers themselves will set an example by cutting out club bars and high life in palace hotels, the crop of embezzlements and defalcations would dwindle in short order.

It is told that a woman on a windy day had hard work keeping her hat on her head, and used both hands to hold it on, letting her skirts fly. "Madam said a man of honor, your skirts are above your knees. I don't care if they are said the woman keeping both hands on her hat. I've had those skirts forty years and the wind has never blown them away yet, but I just bought this hat for $18, and I don't intend to lose it."

A gentleman tells of a school teacher in Rochester who had difficulty with several mischievous boys. One day when one of them had given her a great deal of annoyance she said to him: "I wish I could be your mother for just one week. I would rid you of your naughty disposition." Very well, I will speak to father about it promptly replied the lad.

A little Topaka girl came home from church the other day and was asked what the ministers text was. I know it all right she asserted. Well repeat it her questioner demanded. "Don't be afraid and I will get you a bed quilt," was the astonishing answer. Investigation proved that the central thought of the sermon had been, "Fear not and I will send you a comforter."

Sometimes it pays a man to keep his wife posted as to his business. A Coffeyville man, says the Journal, of that Kansas town advertised in a local paper that he would like to buy a second hand lawn mower. He received an answer which struck him favorably, and after corresponding some time found that his wife was trying to sell him their old lawn mower to get money to buy Christmas presents.

The sale of peanuts in the United States is not a small business, as some persons might suppose. Some $48,000,000 passed through the channels of trade in big and little amounts for this last year. Of this immense sum the growers received but $8,000,000, leaving gross profits to the dealers of $40,000,000. The New York Produce Exchange estimates the acreage of peanuts grown last year at 760,000 acres.

The Cornell (Ill.) Journal editor has made a telling shot in the following: "There is a lot of rot talk about the catalogue houses among country merchants. If catalogue houses have been successful, it has been through advertising, and all the country merchants have to do to offset it and get the business is to do the same thing, and it's not necessary to print a catalogue, for they have their home papers, which go in to every home and are read. This paper is read by an average of 2,000 each week, and the paper does not meet the same fate as the circular. The people are not fooled any more, and the sooner the country merchant contracts for regular space the year around in the local paper and makes it a part of his business and advertizes his wares liberally, the sooner the catalogue houses will go out of business, and there is no other way to meet it successfully."

Excursions to the South.

Stopovers will be allowed going and returning. For further particulars call on George E. Webb, Antioch, Ill.

VICTIMS OF FAKERS

Miss Anna McNamara, of Kenosha, Falls Into the Hands of Swindlers

FAKE THEATRICAL AGENCY ROBS GIRLS

Grace Mikels, of Bloomington, Is Another Victim Who Was Robbed of $300 Worth Diamonds by the same Chicago Swindlers

Anna McNamara, a young woman who is employed at the Penney Sanitarium in Kenosha, reported to the police force of Chicago last Sunday that she had been robbed of ten dollars by a fake theatrical agency in that city. The McNamara girl had ambitions to go on the stage and to this end she had answered an ad in one of the Chicago papers and had started for Chicago to secure a position through the agency. Miss McNamara was exceedingly fortunate to escape with only the loss of her money, as it appears that the agency to which she had applied for a position was simply a blind by which the men engaged in the business could rob their fair victims.

The men in charge of the agency were Edward Roberts and Frank Richmond. They had rooms at 135 Locust street and advertised largely in Chicago papers. It was stated in the ads that the two men could find places on the stage for young women desiring to take up a stage career. Miss McNamara was only one of a large number who had answered the ads and who had gone to accept the promised position.

The conditions under which the two men were working were made public when Miss Grace Mikels, of Bloomington, Ill., appealed to the police for the arrest of the two men, charging that they had bound and gagged her and robbed her of her money and jewels. Miss Mikels had gone to the agency on Saturday and had been told that place had been secured for her, but the men insisted that before she could have the position she would be forced to pay the fee of twenty dollars.

Miss Mikels stated that she could not pay the fee in advance, but that she would pay it out of her wages as soon as they came in. This was unsatisfactory to the men, and as the young woman started to leave the room one of the men caught hold of her and forced her into a big chair. Later she was strapped in the chair and after she had been bound and gagged the men took from her fingers more than $300 worth of diamonds and jewels. After the men had fled from the building, Miss Mikels managed to get the gag out of her mouth and her screams attracted other people in the building, who released her. It seems that the men have escaped and the police have not been able to find any trace of them.

The police of Chicago claim that the men have been working the game for several months and that more than fifty girls have been robbed by the men. It is stated positively that they have no connection with any of the regular theatrical syndicates and that they simply adopted this plan to rob stage struck girls. So far as has been learned Miss McNamara was the only girl from Kenosha to be caught in the web.

Wild Turkeys for State.

Encouraged by the Appropriation of his scheme of utilizing the fund accruing from hunters' licenses for the purchase of south-quail and pheasants to restock the fields and forests, State Game Warden Wheeler has decided to purchase several thousand wild turkeys and set them free in various counties. These birds have been extinct in Illinois for years, due to lack of protection. The legislature took action finally, but the birds had been destroyed. Now it is hoped to start anew and populate if possible the Illinois game preserves with these fine game birds. As soon as the distribution of quail and pheasants is over the importation of the wild turkeys will commence.

May Use Stranger's Auto.

A New Haven (Conn.) Judge recently rendered a decision in which he stated that there is no law in that State which makes it a crime or misdemeanor to take and use an automobile without the owner's permission.

Double Announcement.

When about to be married a young woman in Westphalia discovered that her birth had never been registered, and so her birth and marriage were announced simultaneously.

POSTAL SERVICE AT ST. KILDA

Floating Mail Bag Used by Inhabitants of Island.

The island of St. Kilda lies about fifty miles to the westward of Scotland, and it is without regular mail communication of any kind, the only connection being by means of an occasional trading steamer, which goes in spring and autumn to take off some of the products of the island.

When they wish to communicate with their friends in Scotland or elsewhere the St. Kindans are obliged to resort to a floating mail bag, which consists of a sheepskin buoy plugged with a piece of wood, and attached thereto a label on which is roughly cut the inscription, "St. Kilda Mail. Please Open." Inside the buoy is placed a tin canister containing the letters.

The last "mail" was sent off from St. Kilda on June 21 last and drifted to Shetland in two months and one day. It contained two letters and eight post cards, which were duly forwarded to their destination from Lerwick postoffice. The addresses on two of the post cards were almost obliterated through damp. The sum of 1 shilling was inclosed for postage of the missives. It appears that three similar "mails" were sent off from the island on the same day, but only one, so far as is known, has been picked up.

THE HISTORIAN AT HIS WORK.

Sifting the Golden Truth From Collection of Fables.

A venerable old man, with a pen behind his ear and ink on his fingers, went up the main street of Human town calling out as he went:

"Lest! Any old lies to-day. Biscuits for lies to-day!"

He had a basket of sweet wafers, of biscuit, on one arm, and they were shaped like a human ear. These he was exchanging for the lies that were abundant in this town. Very soon the old man's bag was full.

It was a new bag to collect lies, and many fakes were banded at the expense of the odd old man and his odd occupation. The strange merchant left the main street, and a little child had the curiosity to follow him.

The venerable one turned aside through a door into a beautiful garden in the very heart of the town, and yet quite unknown. He closed the door, but the child peeped through the keyhole, and saw the old man take the bag of lies and give it a good shake. There was a commotion and rattling inside for a time, and the mass seemed to be smaller.

"Ah! Hear them eating each other up!" chuckled the old man.

A few more shakes, and the bag seemed actually empty; but the old man opened it carefully, and there in a far corner was a pinch of pure gold.

The child reported all these things, and the next time they saw the old man the people demanded who he was. He answered: "I am the Historian."—Ernest Thompson Seton's "Woodmyth Fable."

MISSING BROKER FOUND

W. H. Wilson, a Chicago broker, who disappeared from Kenosha last Thursday, was located on Monday night at the village of Salem, where he had applied for work as an ice cutter. Wilson is said to be insane and came to Kenosha after having escaped from a private asylum at Lake Geneva. He reached Kenosha and asked the way to Rockford. This was the last heard of him until he was taken into custody by detectives at one of the Hooker lake ice houses on Monday.

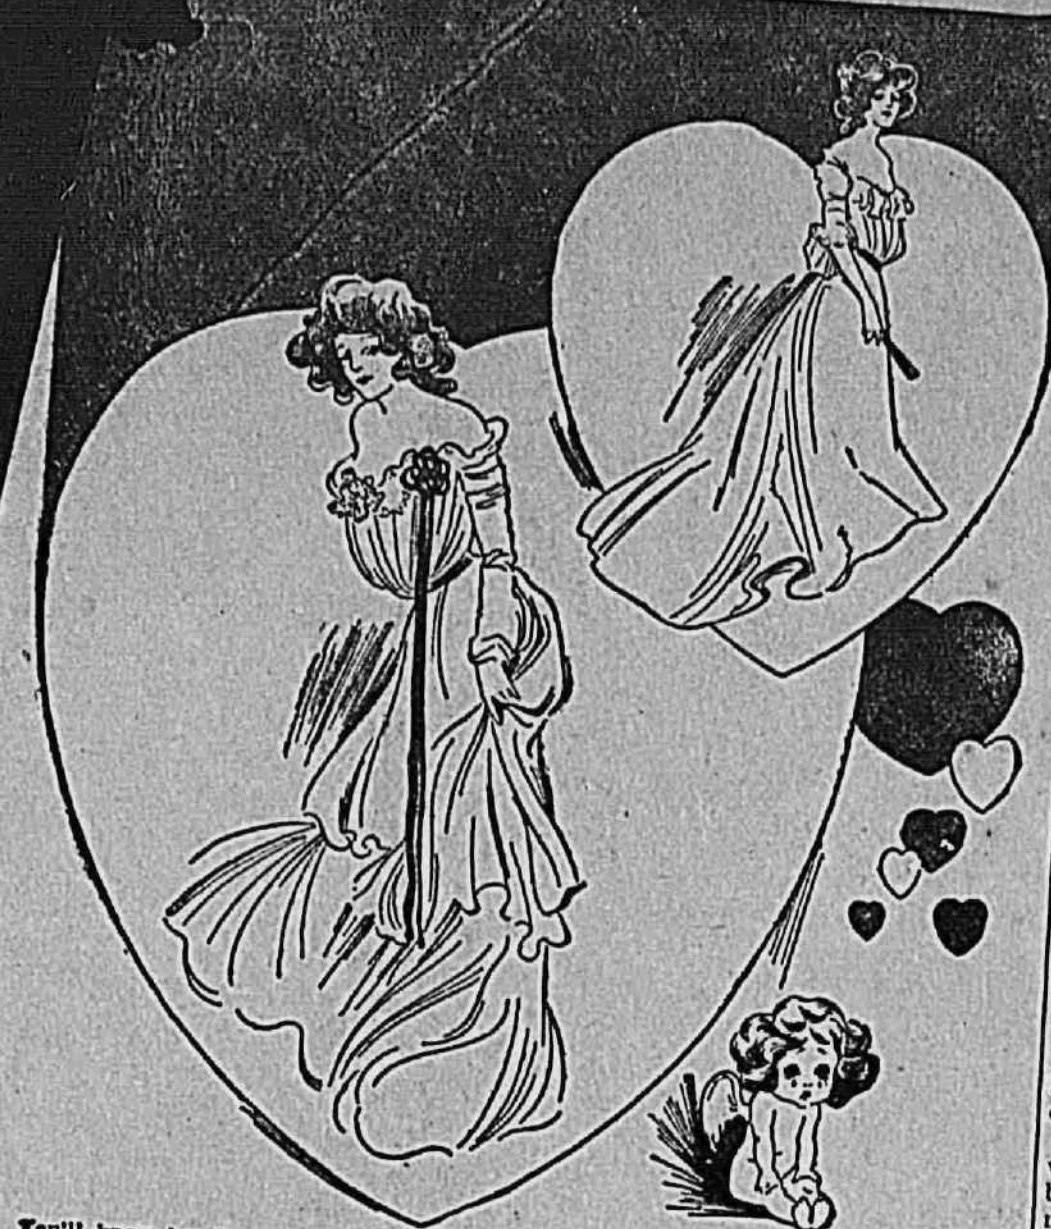

Wilson could give no explanation of his actions, nor could he state where he had been in hiding since his disappearance. He had not been at the ice house in Salem until Monday afternoon. He went to one of the foremen in charge of the work and asked for a job as an ice cutter. The man appeared to be weak and the foreman told him to come around to work in the morning. He stood about the lakes watching the men at work, and while he was there one of the detectives came, and with the statement that he would find a boarding house for him, he managed to get him into a carriage and took him to Kenosha. Lake the man and his guards returned to Chicago.

Rubenstein's Demand.

When Rubenstein was in America some years ago, a friend in New York took him to church. A little priest preached a little sermon on a little theme. The next Sunday evening the friend invited the great musician to go again. "I will," said Rubenstein, "but on one condition, you must come to hear a man who will do to the impossible."

Tar Colored for Cattle.

About $5,000,000 worth of tar are sent from Germany every year.

You'll know her by her winning ways,
A drop of eye, a truant smile,
A heart that is reversible
And up to any woman's wile.

You'll know her later by the way
She apes an air of girlish art;
And turns the old reversible
In glad exchange for any heart.

The Resurrection of a Valentine.

By Mary Wilson.

"Well, I believe everything's ready for the Valentine Festival! I've baked and iced heart cakes till I can see them, no matter where I look." Serena Allen bustled about her bright kitchen busily. She was a large, fair woman, handsome and energetic and capable. She was packing baskets with all manner of things good to eat. Her mother watched her with quiet interest.

"I hope we'll make enough to pay off the church debt, this time. Is that my buggy?" She went over to the window and looked out. "No; it's Mr. Billy Harrison. You remember him, don't you, mother? He was laid up with rheumatism when you were here last winter. They say his boys are powerful good to him. He rents his place to the Masons and boards with them, since his wife died. He has no daughter, and you know what living with daughters-in-law is like; but I'm not saying but what Katherine and Marie are not as good to you as they know how to be. They don't realize your dearest."

Mrs. Bently was leaning over, looking out of the window. She was a plump, sweet-faced little woman, with wavy, white-touched hair and gentle brown eyes. "Serena," she said, timidly, "I don't feel as if I have any disease at all, and I should meet a lot of old friends if I could go with you over to the school house to-day."

Serena looked up from the last basket. "Why, mother, I wouldn't be guilty of letting you go out in this snow for all the festival is worth. Think how cold it is, and you had that bronchial affection in November! A person of fifty-five has to be awfully careful."

"I did want to go," Mrs. Bently said, as she sat down. "I wish you could, but it's bad enough for me. I'm too old to be so foolish." Serena laughed in her comfortable way. "I don't know why being old should make any difference," Mrs. Bently said. She felt very old and miserable and useless. "It is a terrible thing to be fifty-five. I hope I'm not rebellious, Serena, but somehow I don't feel ready to be set aside."

"I'm not surprised, mother, after the way Marie and Katherine treat you. Well, I'm ready now. You won't have a thing to do—here's the wood right at your hand, and your tea will keep nice and hot here on the hearth, and the table is all set for your dinner. And now there's the buggy, and I must go." Serena took her little mother into her arms and kissed her.

Mrs. Bently went over to the window and watched her daughter climb into the buggy and draw the lines over the back of the fat gray horse. "I might have gone," she said, wistfully. "It isn't so very cold."

The newly fallen February snow lay in light drifts and patches over the brown fields, and hung in pretty wreaths and festoons among the dark-green pines and yellowing willows and little naked shrubs. "It looks all icy, like a Valentine. It wouldn't have been too cold. I wish I could have gone." And then the soft, wistful look was gone from her brown eyes and a little spark like the gleam of fire shone in them. "Here I am, fifty-five years old, and I can't remember a single day when I did exactly as I pleased, without thinking of what somebody wanted me to do. I reckon I must be awfully wicked and rebellious, but—I'm not going to take a dose of Serena's medicine to-day." She threw the window open and slowly emptied the glasses that Serena had so carefully filled. "It must be terribly wicked," she said, pouring the liquid upon a little mound of snow, "but somehow I don't seem to care if it is. Pardon me, I shall be sorry when Serena comes."

Mrs. Bently started guiltily. Some one was knocking at the front door. She closed the window and put back the curtains of iron-gray hair that the wind had loosened. A quick color came into her cheeks. She felt nervous and shy. But she hurried to open the door. The wind whistled and howled, and she stood on the porch, her shaggy overcoat, her shaggy hat, her shaggy gloves. When she looked at the two men who were standing there, she brought back to her cheeks, just as it had always done. She held out her hand to him.

"Why, Caldonia, is it you? I expected to see Mrs. Allen. I didn't know you were in the neighborhood. It's like old times to be shaking hands with you, and it's been a long time. Strange how a body remembers! The years have been good to you; they haven't hurt you. I declare, you look younger than Serena."

She laughed confusedly and led the way to Serena's pretty sitting room. "Serena's gone over to Sugar Bottom school to-night; she's helping to decorate, and all that. It's for the church, and she'll be home till late bedtime," Mrs. Bently explained as the tall old man slipped out of his cap and coat and sat down before her fire.

"And are you going?" Mr. Harrison looked at her with his smiling eyes. Some ways brought an odd little quiver to her heart.

"No," she answered; "Serena wouldn't let me go out in the snow." "Such a little bit of a snow, too! You want to go, don't you?" he asked. "I should have liked it, but I'm too old now to feel disappointment. Perhaps you will leave a message for Serena, unless you expect to go to the festival," she said.

"Maybe I may go. You see, I drove over to Mrs. Burton's to see if I could get a picture that my son John wants. John's an artist, and he has a fancy for family portraits. He wants one of my old picture, but she hasn't. She thought she'd seen one here, and I stopped to ask her."

"I'm glad you did. I have a picture of your mother, and I reckon Annie saw it when I lived here with Uncle Hiram. You know she willed the place to Serena. It's a picture of your mother and your self. You were a little boy, and she was standing by her. I'll bring it right now." She hurried out of the room and returned with a little box in her hands. "I can't turn the key; the lock is rusty. I thought you might unlock it. It hasn't moved since before Jasper and I moved to East Bend."

Mr. Harrison took the box. She brought a bottle of oil and a feather, and the two gray heads were bowed together over the little black box. He worked patiently, turning the box this way and that and shaking the little key in the rusty lock. Suddenly the lid fell back while the box was upside down and the contents were scattered over the carpet.

"That's too bad," he laughed. "I've who sees it—Borce."

pouring all your little keepsakes out." His face was suddenly grave and he stooped and picked up a little worn baby shoe.

"It was Bonnie's," she said gently, as he laid it in her hand. "I didn't keep anything else when he died. He was my first baby." She began to gather up the fallen articles and he helped her.

"Here's the picture, Billy," and she held up to him a beautiful old daguerrotype in a quaintly carved case. She wiped the glass with a corner of her apron and turned the curiously evasive picture so that he might see it. "Your mother always looked like that to me, and that is you beside her; I could always see the favor. You look like it yet."

He took the picture and went over to the window and she gathered up the things that had been in the box.

"I thank you for this, Caldonia. John shall return it. I know you loved my mother," the old man said.

"Yes, I loved her." "Did this come out of the box?" He was crossing over to her. "See here, Donie, did you keep this in the box?" "What is it?" Her face was crimson and she sat down in Serena's little sewing chair.

"It's this." He held out a little yellowed, lace-edged valentine. She looked at it silently. Inside the paper lacework a wreath of forget-me-nots was held together by two extremely fat cupids, who sat upon a scroll, on the flying ends of which was inscribed a tender little verse. Inside the wreath lay a large crimson heart with a tiny tongue of flame at the top. "Was it in the box, Donie?"

"It was under the paper at the bottom. I never could bear to burn it up. It didn't hurt anybody," she said, an odd little quiver in her voice.

"I remember how pretty it looked to me when I bought it over in Atlanta. It's been a long, long time, Donie, but I remember. I reckon you've been happy; you look like it. You are as pretty as ever, Donie."

"Everybody has been good to me. The children are too good. You don't know the boys. She was nervous and she felt safer, somehow, when she could speak of her children. Actually they do tire me with kindness. At Charlie's they never do anything without consulting me. It wears me all out. And at Dick's they are so considerate, and here—she glanced at the medicine glasses and laughed. "It is only that I am growing old," she said. "I know what it is, Donie. We've missed."

"I reckon younger people don't understand what older folks need," she said quickly.

"Why should they think us different from themselves?" he asked. "I don't know." She had taken the paper from the bottom of the box and was wiping a speck of dust away. He looked down at the little old valentine.

"Are you going to keep it, Donie?" "Yes." "Why?" "For the sake of old times." "They were good old times, Donie." "I don't know. I often feel sorry for the poor little girl." "She was the dearest and prettiest little girl in all the wide world." "She didn't know it; nobody ever told her so."

"That was because she would not let them; she was such a shy little girl." He laughed softly. "Donie, why didn't you answer my valentine? We've done the best we could, we've had our joys and sorrows, but through it all, Donie, I have wanted to know if I was mistaken in the old days when I thought you cared for me. I wanted to know why your cheeks answered my valentine?"

She caught her breath sharply. "Why, Billy, there was no question." "No question?" Donie. "He took the valentine in his hand and raising the fat red heart revealed a written line. "Donie, I love you. Will you marry me? I'll come for you to-night." You went to the party with Jasper," he said, reproachfully.

"I didn't know—that—the heart—lifted up," she said. "Now you know," he said simply. "We are old people now," she was trembling.

"We are not. That is you and this is I. Give me my answer, Donie." He smiled down into her eyes. So that was how it happened that Serena Allen, looking up from her pink and white heart cakes, saw her mother radiant and smiling in the midst of the Valentine Festival!

"Why, mother, what have you done?" Mrs. Allen cried, and the blushing little woman looked up helplessly. "Why, I suppose, my dear, that we've eloped; haven't we, Billy?" "That's it," Mr. Harrison laughed. "We've run away and got married, Serena; and see here, boys, it all came from a valentine. They are good things, only—don't set them with the fuse too long."

"Ladies' World."

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—Would Have Died but for Cuticura.

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My Aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. Stray Cow's Act. A stray cow, picked up by the police on the South Side, nearly put the officer out of business and created lots of fun for the urinals in the neighborhood. The cow was captured by the newly appointed subpolice, and, wishing to distinguish himself by an arrest, he determined to take the bovine to the station house. Procuring a rope, he fastened it to her horns and started down Cottage Grove avenue. The thoroughfare was slippery from a rainstorm, and in a hurry the policeman was sliding down the asphalt on his stomach, with the cow on a dead run. 31 Boxes of Gold

300 Boxes of Greenbacks

For the most words made up from these letters

Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts

331 people will earn these prizes

Around the fireside or about the well-lighted family reading table during the winter evenings the children and grown-ups can play with their wits and see how many words can be made.

20 people making the greatest number of words will each receive a little box containing a $10 gold piece.

10 people will each win one box containing a $5 gold piece.

300 people will each win a box containing $1 in paper money and one person who makes the highest number of words over all contestants will receive a box containing $100 in gold.

It is really a most fascinating bit of fun to take up the list evening after evening and see how many words can be added.

A few rules are necessary for absolute fair play.

Any word authorized by Webster's dictionary will be counted, but no name of person. Both the singular and plural can be used, as for instance "grape" and "grapes."

The letters in "Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts" may be repeated in the same word. Geographical names authorized by Webster will be counted.

Arrange the words in alphabetical classes, all those beginning with A together and those beginning with B to come under E, etc.

When you are writing down the words leave some spaces, in the A, B, and other columns to fill in later as new words come to you, for they will spring into mind every evening.

It is almost certain that some contestants will tie with others. In such cases a prize identical in value and character with that offered in that class shall be awarded to each. Each list of words is a plainly written letter Nuts, but the contestant is not required to purchase a pig. These letters are not to contain poetry, or fancy flourishes, but simple, truthful statements of fact. For illustration:

A person may have experienced some ineffectual or chronic ailment traceable to a bad selection of food that failed to give the body and brain the energy, health and power desired. Seeking better conditions a change in food is made and Grape-Nuts and cream used in place of the former diet. Suppose one quits the meat, fried potatoes, starchy, sticky messes of half-cooked oats or wheat and cuts out the coffee. Try, say, for breakfast a bit of fruit, a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft-boiled eggs, a slice of hard toast and a cup of Postum Ford Cereal. Some amateur says: "A man would faint away on that," but my dear friend, we will put dollars to your penance that the noon hour will find a man on our breakfast husker and with stronger heart-beat and clearer working brain than he ever had on the o diet.

Suppose, if you have never read a move for absolutely clear health that pushes you along each day with a spring in your step and a serve vigor in muscle and brain makes the doing of things a pleasure you join the army of "plain old common sense" and start in now.

After you have been 2 or 3 weeks the Grape-Nuts training you will state of how you used to be how you are now. The simple will interest others and surprise self. We never publish names or on permission, but we often facts in the newspapers and requested give the names by private.

There is plenty of time to gain personal experience with Grape-Nuts write a sensible, truthful letter sent in with the list of words; contest does not close until 1906. So start in as soon as possible to building words, and start Grape-Nuts. Cut this statement and keep the letters Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts before you and when you write letter you will have some reason to write on the subject, "Why I O Grape-Nuts."

Remember 331 persons will win prizes, which will be awarded in exact and just manner as soon as the list can be counted after April 1, 1906. Every contestant will be sent a printed list of names and addresses of winners on application, in order to have proof that the prizes are sent as agreed. The company is well known all over the world for absolute fidelity to its agreements and every single one of the 331 winners may depend on receiving the prize won.

Many persons might feel it useless to contest, but when one remembers the great number of prizes—331—the curiosity of seeing how many words can really be made up evening after evening and the good, natural fun and education in the competition, it seems to lose and a fine opportunity with one of the many boxes of gold o greenbacks.

We make the prediction that some who win a prize of gold or greenbacks will also win back health and strength worth more to them than a wagonfull of money prizes.

There are no preliminaries, cut out this statement and go to it, send in the list and letter before April 30, 1906, to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and let your name and address be plainly written.

The Algieras Conference is gradually assuming the appearance of an unlimited round contest.

If they send Editor Mann to Sin Sing, the youth in fairness to send his victims to Bloomingdale.

If Arizona really wants to get rid of the joint statehood nightmare, she ought to try changing her politics.

One of the meanest features of Perry Belmont's National Publicity Bill is that no honest politician has the least excuse for opposing it.

If the House and Senate Conferees should fail to agree on any rate legislation, the railroads would probably manage to bear up under it.

A posse of cartoonists and special correspondents is trying to run down the Black Hand gang that failed to assassinate Governor Pennybacker.

The fact that none of Col Mann's victims have demanded their money back, fosters the suspicion that they do not think he will be convicted after all.

President Roosevelt sent back his copy of "Fads and Fancies." Grover Cleveland has not been displaying his lately. Bishop Potter is yet to be heard from.

The trouble with the Agricultural Department, according to the Keep Commission was not the sort of reports it published but the way it published them.

Chairman Shonts wants the Panama Canal construction thoroughly investigated. The whole complaint so far has been that nobody could find any construction to investigate.

A number of interesting things have been brought out by the visit of the Imperial Chinese Mission to Washington. Among these is the suggestion of a constitution for China. Now this is not only news but to the average hearer it is quite unbelievable. Yet it is made by such an authority as Ouyang King vice consul at San Francisco, who is with the party, and at all appearances Mr. Ouyang not only takes his own announcement in perfect good faith, but seems surprised that it has not been understood on this side before.

According to Consul Ouyang the Son of Heaven is tired of the cares and responsibilities of an absolute monarchy and contemplates limiting his own powers after he shall have fully digested the report of his commissioners and gradually prepared his people for the new order of things. It is not estimated that this change in Chinese home affairs is to be anything sudden. Ten or twelve years is put as the earliest at which a constitution is to be announced. This does not sound precipitate, nor yet very dilatory when one comes to think of it. A dozen years is not long in the life of a nation, and if the Emperor of China really contemplates divesting himself of absolute power and working out a constitution for his country based on the report of his two commissions that are now studying Europe and the United States, then a decade is a reasonable enough time in which to do it. It will take longer than that to educate the Chinese people up to the proper use of even a decidedly restricted franchise, and it would look to the outside as though the Emperor were going about his self appointed task in a strikingly common sense way. One can easily say that a constitution of the right sort would be the making of China. She is the looser sort of a confederation in her present form and the sense of national unity and patriotism in her people to the western mind curiously wanting. But one can easily conceive how a moderately planned constitution would tighten up the national bands and make the Great Slott among nations play a very much more important part than she has hitherto done. There are one or two things in the way of this constitutional Utopia. One would be enough, and that is that the Empress Dowager is ruling to all intents and purposes and if the constitution idea does not happen to meet with her approval the son of Heaven may die some summer as Kipling says "of coolers-the white arsenic sort."

All Run Down

THIS is a common expression we hear on every side. Unless there is some organic trouble, the condition can doubtless be remedied. Your doctor is the best adviser. Do not dose yourself with all kinds of advertised remedies—get his opinion. More than likely you need a concentrated fat food to enrich your blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is just such a food in its best form. It will build up the weakened and wasted body when all other foods fail to nourish. If you are run down or emaciated, give it a trial: it cannot hurt you. It is essentially the best possible nourishment for delicate children and pale, anaemic girls. We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, dispirits and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Death of Faithful Servant.

The following announcement appears in the Geneva papers: "M. and Mme. Edouard Monos regretfully announce the death of their faithful servant, Mlle. Gabrielle Thomasset, who has been in the service of our family for the last seventy-six years in succession."

Luckiest Man in Arkansas.

"I'm the luckiest man in Arkansas," writes A. L. Stanley, of Bruno, "since the restoration of my wife's health after five years of continuous coughing and bleeding from the lungs; and I owe my good fortune to the world's greatest medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which I know from experience will cure consumption if taken in time. My wife improved with first bottle and twelve bottles completed the cure." Cures the worst coughs and colds or money refunded. At J. H. Swan's, druggist, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

MARION'S BRIGADE

By MAJOR J. H. ROBINSON

was quite a number of persons at Rocky Creek on the morning of the 14th. They were men used to hardship; they could wield the rifle with deadly precision; they were rugged and they were brave. They were men of the old school, who had seen the smoke of battle and the blood of the slain. They were men of the old school, who had seen the smoke of battle and the blood of the slain. They were men of the old school, who had seen the smoke of battle and the blood of the slain.

cross-eyed, cap'n," said Joe. "I reckon you're about right, stranger," replied the latter. "Satan seems to be let loose for a season to turn things upside down in these parts." "We must fight, and there's no honorable alternative. There are men enough in this State to achieve a glorious victory, if they will only concentrate and organize under efficient leaders. See what Gen. Marion has done within a few days; he has infused new courage into the hearts of the people, notwithstanding the defeat of Gen. Gates at Camden."

"Tarnel destruction, stranger! You don't mean to say Gates has been whipped at Camden?" exclaimed Hawes. "It is too true. He has sustained a total defeat, and the remnant of the American army is flying panic-stricken from the successful legions of Cornwallis, but Marion and Sumter are destined to revive the courage of the patriots," replied Henderson. "I feel as if you had given me a heavy blow in the region of the stomach," said Captain Nick.

"Never despond, sir, while you are able to bear arms against the enemy," added Henderson. "Hark!" said Hawes. "I hear the sound of horses' feet. The Tories are at hand. If my brave fellows take good aim, we'll pay 'em off for some of their old tricks and cruelties." While Hawes was speaking the advance of the Tory band swept round a point into sight, and presently the whole party was visible. As soon as the advancing horsemen perceived the captain's little party of ten they spurred forward more furiously with loud shouts of exultation. It was very obvious that they felt sure of cutting the force of Rocky Creek to pieces without losing a man; for it seemed to them like sheer madness for so small a party to resist them.

John Henderson sprang into the saddle and Captain Hawes hurried his men from the approaching enemy at a double quick step. When he had retreated about a hundred yards he gave the order to "halt," and "right about face," and the parties stood boldly with their front to the foe.

of South Carolina," he observed to the captain. "I reckon you're about right, stranger," replied the latter. "Satan seems to be let loose for a season to turn things upside down in these parts." "We must fight, and there's no honorable alternative. There are men enough in this State to achieve a glorious victory, if they will only concentrate and organize under efficient leaders. See what Gen. Marion has done within a few days; he has infused new courage into the hearts of the people, notwithstanding the defeat of Gen. Gates at Camden."

"Tarnel destruction, stranger! You don't mean to say Gates has been whipped at Camden?" exclaimed Hawes. "It is too true. He has sustained a total defeat, and the remnant of the American army is flying panic-stricken from the successful legions of Cornwallis, but Marion and Sumter are destined to revive the courage of the patriots," replied Henderson. "I feel as if you had given me a heavy blow in the region of the stomach," said Captain Nick.

"Never despond, sir, while you are able to bear arms against the enemy," added Henderson. "Hark!" said Hawes. "I hear the sound of horses' feet. The Tories are at hand. If my brave fellows take good aim, we'll pay 'em off for some of their old tricks and cruelties." While Hawes was speaking the advance of the Tory band swept round a point into sight, and presently the whole party was visible. As soon as the advancing horsemen perceived the captain's little party of ten they spurred forward more furiously with loud shouts of exultation. It was very obvious that they felt sure of cutting the force of Rocky Creek to pieces without losing a man; for it seemed to them like sheer madness for so small a party to resist them.

Hawes improved the time and poured in his fire, which effectively checked their advance. The voice of the leader was heard trying to rally the astonished Tories; but they could not be easily rallied, for their enemies were concealed from view, and their fears magnified their pumbers greatly. The Tory officers shouted and threatened in vain; those who could do so turned and fled, and the officers were obliged to follow their example.

When once fairly in motion their terror seemed to lend them wings, and they spurred on without regard to order, glory or superiority, until they were far beyond the reach of the men of Rocky Creek. "If your men were only mounted!" exclaimed Henderson. "They must be mounted," replied Hawes. "We can never do what we want to without horses. I've been thinking 'em on' for some time. Horses are scarce, for the Britishers and Tories have stolen the best ones; but where there's a will there's a way. Men, catch these animals that are running about rounder without any riders."

The expression of Captain Hawes was serious, but not stern, yet far more dignified than usual. "The surgeon thinks there is no hope for me," said the dying man, faintly. "Not in this world," replied Hawes. "Then I must try and make the best improvement of what little time remains," added the Tory, speaking with much difficulty.

"I'm sorry, neighbor, that you're dyin' in a bad cause," said the captain, sorrowfully. "We are brethren, and citizens of one common country; and if you and been called on to give up airily things while fightin' side by side with me, I shouldn't have felt so bad about it, because I have an idea that death under such circumstances wouldn't have been disgraceful but glorious."

"I begin to feel, now that my life is approaching its close, that you are engaged in a more honorable cause than that in which I received this mortal wound," remarked the Tory, sadly. "I haven't come here to reproach you, by no means whatever, friend Simpson; but there is one thing I want to know before you shut your eyes forever on the changin' concerns of this present world. Our plans have been betrayed by some vile traitor, who eats bread with us daily. I want to find out the villain, and I hope you'll feel free to tell me. You probably can't hold out more than an hour or two at the most, and perhaps gettin' such a thing as that off your conscience may kind of straighten you up for the change, and make you stand firmer, and with a bolder front, before the great Commander-in-Chief of all the armies of the earth."

Simpson shuddered, and for a moment was so convulsed that he was unable to reply. When he became calmer and calmer, he turned his glassy eyes upon the captain with an expression truly mournful. He hesitated a moment, as if not quite decided, and then motioned for Hawes to give him his ear. The captain bent over the dying man eagerly, and he whispered a name. "It is well," said Hawes. "I reckon the arrangements for your conscience will be in better order for judgment, when you answer the last roll-call."

"I thank you, I'm sure, for your well-meant kindness," said Simpson, while a tear moistened his dim eye. "I hope we shall meet in the ranks of heaven, where all is concord and peace. As you go along, I wish you would be good enough to ask Elder Martin to step in and see me."

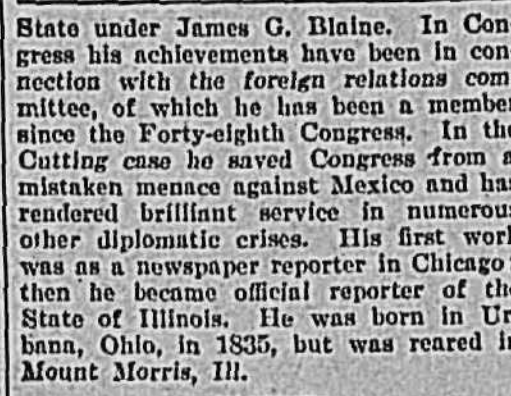

"I will. It's a good idea, for he knows better than I do what you will need on a long march," said Hawes. "I hope you will forgive me, neighbor," added Simpson, stretching out his cold hand. "God knows how freely," said the captain, in a subdued voice. "Good-by, Simpson, till I line the army above," he added.

"Farewell, captain. If I should recover, I would gladly fight under you. Farewell, for the drummer of death is already beating the reveille," said Simpson, feebly; and a moment after Hawes was proceeding toward home in a very thoughtful mood. He met Henderson on the way, and the two walked away together, conversing in a friendly manner until they were opposite the dwelling of Rev. William Martin.

R. R. HITT TO RETIRE.

Illinois Congressman Has Had Long Career in Public Life

Congressman Robert Roberts Hitt, chairman of the House committee on foreign relations, who announces his retirement from public life with the expiration of his present term, has been a member of Congress continuously since 1882 from what is now the Thirteenth Illinois District. When elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of R. M. A. Hawk he already had been first secretary of the legation at Paris and assistant Secretary of

ROBERT R. HITT.

State under James G. Blaine. In Congress his achievements have been in connection with the foreign relations committee, of which he has been a member since the Forty-eighth Congress. In the latter part of his career he has been a mistaken menace against Mexico and has rendered brilliant service in numerous other diplomatic crises. His first work was as a newspaper reporter in Chicago; then he became official reporter of the State of Illinois. He was born in Urbana, Ohio, in 1835, but was reared in Mount Morris, Ill.

HOLDS UP POLICE STATION.

Insane Man Then Enters House and Successfully Resists Capture.

Charles Harwood, a former policeman, now violently insane, fought a bloodless battle with the police at his house in Peoria. In the afternoon he entered the police headquarters and at the point of a revolver held up the chief and seven officers for fifteen minutes while he vented his insane wrath in a deluge of curses. After threatening to shoot the entire crowd and failing to shoot because a snapped cartridge did not discharge he backed out of the station and made his escape. Within an hour after the holdup of the station Harwood appeared near his home on Bigelow street and entered the residence of a Mrs. Montgomery, whom he assaulted with the butt of his gun and knocked her to the floor. Taking two weapons from his house, he barricaded himself in his own residence, a few doors farther on and stood off a squad of police who surrounded the house, but could not force an entrance. At 1 o'clock in the morning Harwood suddenly appeared on the porch of his house, dressed in his underwear and with a gun in each hand. He cut loose on the officers in front of the house and the fire was returned, but no shots took effect.

DENEEN ON ILLINOIS HISTORY.

Governor Addresses Annual Meeting of State Society.

Gov. Deneen spoke at the seventh annual meeting of the Illinois State Historical Society in the Senate chamber of the statehouse in Springfield, pointing out its important work in preserving the records and its bearing on the future of the commonwealth. The annual address was delivered by Frederick J. Turner, professor of history in the University of Wisconsin. At the day sessions of the society the speakers included Prof. C. W. Alvord of the University of Illinois, Judge George Dupuy of Chicago, Senator O. F. Berry of Carthage, Mrs. A. G. Miller of Springfield, and Mrs. Jessie Palmer, Weber of Springfield, who read a paper prepared by Dr. Samuel Willard of Chicago. Gen. Alfred Orendorff of Springfield was again chosen president of the society and the other officers were also re-elected.

ALL OVER THE STATE.

Mrs. Abe Depew was struck by a Clover Leaf through freight train at Herk, and killed.

John Cox, a flyerman, is dead as a result of blood poisoning. He had injured one of his fingers while opening a bale of hay.

Fire at the State Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Jacksonville was confined to the barns, which were destroyed, with cattle and horses, at a loss of $10,000.

Roy Hopper, city clerk of Galesburg, was suspended by the City Council because of a shortage in his accounts and his inability to procure a new bondsman.

Henry Washington, an escaped slave and Union army cook, who for years was body servant of the war Governor of Illinois, Richard Yates, died in Jacksonville.

Governor Deneen has appointed Fritz Eustace, Jr., Chicago, chief grain inspector at East St. Louis, to take the place of Charles Davis, who will go to the Chicago office.

Fifty temporary clerks are to be dropped from the rolls of the Chicago post-office, according to the statement made to Postmaster Busse during his visit to urge more assistants.

The mayor and aldermen of Joliet were given a banquet by residents of the city in celebration of the passage of an ordinance providing for the elevation of railroad tracks in the city.

Rev. Mr. Blederswolf, the evangelist, closed a three weeks' revival in Elgin, having spoken to from 4,000 to 5,000 people each day at the Coliseum. A collection of $1,000 was taken for his personal use.

Passenger train No. 1, west bound, on the Santa Fe road, went into a ditch at Laura. The smoker, chair car, baggage car and express car were overturned. A twisted rail caused the wreck. The conductor and two passengers were injured, but not seriously.

Jesus Lettner, aged 15, stabbed John Moews and Charles Peterson in a youthful encounter in Bloomington. Moews died and Lettner was arrested and charged with manslaughter. All are members of respected families. Lettner claims self-defense.

United States Pension Commissioner Vespasian Warner has notified the people of his home city, Clinton, that he will donate $10,000 for a public library, providing that the city give a site and agreed to support the institution. The offer will be accepted.

Charges of hazing were filed against Midshipman William Thomas Boyd Jr., of Peoria, a cadet in the third class of the Annapolis Naval Academy. The trial of Midshipman George H. Melvin of Geneseo for hazing was concluded the other day, and decision was reserved.

William Grote of Elgin surprised his friends by the announcement that he had been married in Chicago to Mrs. Mary A. Surbridge of Elgin, and that they were about to start on a two months' trip to California. Mr. Grote is a capitalist, a member of the State Republican Central Committee, and was a widower.

The lid has been placed on the tobacco jar at Shurtleff College, in Alton. Cigars, pipes, cigarettes and stogies are under the ban, and those few who masticate the weed will have to chew gum or quit chewing altogether. The Reverend Doctor J. D. S. Riggs, president of the college, made the order, and he says it is imperative.

Governor Deneen has made six appointments in the office of the State Grain Inspector in Chicago. They will succeed an equal number of retiring office-holders who received their appointments from Governor Yates. The new men are Representative Edward Green, Allan Lilly and Messrs. Chapman, Olson, Mansfield and Helander.

One of the largest ice plants in the world is to be constructed at Mounds by the Central Ice Company, recently capitalized at $500,000, and is to supply the banana warehouses of the Illinois Central with ice. The plant will be 60 feet wide and 80 feet long, built entirely of cement. The plant's capacity will be 400 tons of ice daily.

Fred Sells of Springfield has filed suit for $50,000 against the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, alleging that it drove him out of business as an independent oil dealer by means of unfair competition and misrepresentation. The suit follows accusations made in Decatur by Maywood Maxon, former employee of the Standard, who lost his position.

A husky baby, exercising his lungs in the open air, convinced the law, as represented by a policeman in Elgin, that the fresh air treatment and physical culture are good even for youngsters a year old. Neighbors had complained that Mrs. Jacob Bath was exposing her child for an hour on the lawn every day, and that its walls disturbed them. The policeman saw that the infant was well covered, heard the mother's explanations and departed.

Judge Marshall dismissed the case against former Mayor Crollus of Joliet, who was accused of conspiring with two police officers to prevent Italian residents of the First Ward from voting in the aldermanic election of 1904. The ground was that the legal time for the trial expired with the September term of court, and that the case had not then been called. It was on the docket of Judge Geunsey, whose illness and subsequent death caused the delay.

FARMERS BUILD 'PHONE LINES.

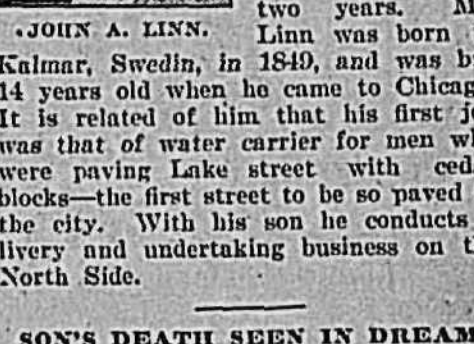

Much Benefit Results to Southern Illinois Rural Districts.

Since the coming of a telephone system to that portion of the state, "Egypt" now is feeling more civilized than ever before. The change around Alto Pass has been little less than marvelous during the last few weeks and the coming of the telephone marks the severing of the last link that bound the region with the traditions of the past. Comparatively young men can well remember when the ox team was used generally and when the whistle of a railroad locomotive would have caused a panic. The farmers call the new system the "hayseed" line, because the farmers themselves built and are maintaining it. Pleased with the advancement they have made since installing this latest evidence of civilization, they are extending the lines for miles in every direction and now the housewife can talk to her acquaintances in every portion of the county without leaving her house. Much of the loneliness of the country districts has been dispelled by means of the telephone. Social conversations by the long-distance system are carried on every evening. Many of the farmers have graphophones and other musical instruments and give impromptu concerts for the benefit of their less fortunate neighbors, who can hear over the wire. A great feeling of security is prevalent in the district since the installation of the telephone. Doctors can be summoned without trouble and officers of the law always are within easy reach if needed.

CHICAGO MAN UNDER SUSPICION.

John A. Linn Involved in Charges Affecting Illegal Fees.

John A. Linn, clerk of the Circuit Court in Chicago, who figures in grand jury proceedings in relation to illegal fees and salaries, was elected to his present position in 1904, and previously had been clerk of the Superior Court. He was a member of the City Council in 1870-81 and again in 1887-87, and subsequently was County Commissioner for two years. Mr. Linn was born in Kalmar, Sweden, in 1849, and was but 14 years old when he came to Chicago. It is related of him that his first job was that of water carrier for men who were paying Lake street with cedar blocks—the first street to be so paved in the city. With his son he conducts a livery and undertaking business on the North Side.

JOHN A. LINN.

SON'S DEATH SEEN IN DREAM.

Bloomington Mother Afterward Learns Boy Was Drowned.

A mind picture in a dream, experienced by Mrs. C. G. Smith of Bloomington, was given a tragic sequence the following day when she received a message that her son was one of the victims of the Valencia, wrecked on the Pacific ocean. She saw her son struggling in the waves and then become swallowed up in the vortex of the waters. So vivid was the dream that she was aroused from her slumber. She told her husband the following morning of the dream, but little attention was paid to it, as neither imagined that the son, Mark, was on the ocean. Later in the day a message was received at the residence of the Smiths in Winnebago county bringing the intelligence that the son was among the victims. The remarkable mental experience created much astonishment. The young man was formerly employed on the Northwestern railway and left last fall for a long trip through the West. He was en route home, taking an ocean voyage, when the disaster came.

SLAIN WOMAN IS IDENTIFIED.

Husband Views Corpse of Mrs. Mangrum, Found in Ohio River.

The body found in the Ohio river near Cairo was identified as that of Mrs. Rosa Mangrum of Nashville, Tenn. O. G. Mangrum of Nashville, husband of the woman, and Mrs. Florence Trosdale of Birmingham, Ala., a sister, both positively identified the body. Mrs. Mangrum disappeared from her home in Nashville on Dec. 24. She had a large sum of money and valuables on her person and was bound for Chicago by way of St. Louis on business for the W. C. T. U., being connected with that organization. From the time she left home until her body was found all trace of her was lost and as no valuables whatever were found upon the body it is supposed the woman was murdered and robbed and her body thrown into the river.

SINKS TO CHIN IN QUICKSAND.

Man Wanders Into Treacherous Ditch and Is Rescued by Police.

Wandering into a ditch, the bottom of which was quicksand, Louis Dvornek, 24 years old, of South Chicago, was rescued just as he had sunk in the treacherous slime to his chin. A passing pedestrian heard his cries for help, and, being unable to drag him from the ditch, called the police, who arrived in time to save the man from death. Ropes were thrown about him and he was dragged to solid ground.

ESCAPED CONVICT IS CAUGHT.

Negro from Illinois Prison Was Shot in the Leg.

While attempting to escape from the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Sparta by swimming up the Okaw river, a negro convict was shot through the leg. He managed to get away, but was recaptured at Missouri Junction by residents of that place, who received the $50 reward. The convict had but one month to serve, and no reason can be assigned for his attempt to escape.

200 DOZEN WAISTS EN ROUTE

and will be on sale

SATURDAY :: MONDAY
TUESDAY

590

THIS IS WITHOUT DOUBT THE MOST REMARKABLE OFFER it has ever been your good fortune to receive, but it is only in line with the liberal treatment that is always accorded those who patronize "WAUKEGAN'S GREATEST STORE,"—the store of real economies—where every dollar does double duty. This store never neglects an opportunity to secure extraordinary values for its customers. Discounted bills and large orders make us favorites in the Eastern markets and the really good things come to us as a natural sequence. We are ever alert and eager to share the good things which come to us with our customers. The bigger the promise the better we keep it, and the real worth of everything we offer saves you dollars and at all times gives you entire satisfaction.

BUT THIS IS A STORY OF WAISTS

59c

White Indian Head Waists—beautifully embroidered fronts—well made, perfect fitting and the kind you would readily give $1.50 for. WE PUT 500 OF THESE WAISTS ON SALE LAST SATURDAY. Eager buyers were waiting when the store was opened in the morning and every waist was gone at 10 o'clock. This was a record breaking sale, but it was a record breaking value—the first of the great series that will make this great store even more famous in 1906. At 2:00 o'clock 500 MORE of these splendid garments were received and Monday saw the last one go. Realizing the really extraordinary value in these waists, WE WIRED OUR MR. HEIN, WHO IS IN NEW YORK, TO SECURE 200 DOZENS MORE AND WE NOW OFFER THE ENTIRE 200 DOZENS FOR SATURDAY, MONDAY AND TUESDAY AT 59c.

AT THE SAME TIME we make the last call for those who need winter goods. The stock is really only a remnant, but what remains goes at less than cost of manufacture. THIS IS THE LAST CALL. All winter goods left over from this sale will go to a jobber. We brook no delay—opening each season early and disposing of all stocks on hand, making this store always a model of newness. Every train now brings something new and seasonable. Our Mr. Hein is searching the markets for goods which will please and be of value to our customers, and his efforts are richly rewarded—the best proof of which is a host of pleased customers and a store filled with brightness, newness and fashions that delight women who are careful dressers.

And withall, this is an exclusive store—one where you find that which is modish but unlike your neighbors—except, of course, in the style lines. We find our pleasure in serving well. We have advised our Mr. Hein to remain in the East three weeks longer in order to secure the very latest styles and greatest values, and if necessary, lease the shops, employ high class designers and have the goods made up in the exclusive styles that have made this store famous. Rapidly increasing patronage warrants us in making extraordinary purchases, as we are well known as competitors of Chicago department stores and we lead them all when it comes to low prices and correct styles. Remember, we are making February a notable month for low prices.

Spring Goods Will Arrive Daily Until Our Grand Opening.

"Raymond, is this true?" Mr. Lansd asked, as the door closed upon his wife. He spoke as if there had been no break or change in the conversation since Mr. Gilbert's name had been mentioned.

If the answer to this question had involved a sentence of death, or a reprieve from the gallows, Roland Lansdell could not have asked it more easily. He ought to have believed in Isabel so firmly as to be quite unmoved by village slander; but he loved her much too much to be reasonable. Jealousy, demon—closely united as a Siamese to Love, the god—was already gnawing at his entrails. It could not be, it could not be, that she had deceived and lured him; but if she had; ah, baseness, what treachery!

"There is a strange man staying in a little rustic tavern in Nessborough Hollow. You know what gossip these country people are. Heaven knows I never put myself out of the way to other people's business; but these things get bruited about in all manner of places."

"Tell your story plainly, Ray. There is a strange man staying in Nessborough Hollow—well, what has he to do with Mrs. Gilbert?"

"Only this much—she has been walking alone with this man, after dark, in Nessborough Hollow."

"It must be a lie; a villainous invention! or if—If she has been seen to this man, he is some relation. I have reason to think that she has a relation staying in this neighborhood."

"But why, in that case, should she meet the man secretly at such a place, while her husband is lying ill?"

"There might be a hundred reasons."

Mr. Raymond shrugged his shoulders. "Can you suggest one?" he asked.

"But has she been seen to meet him?" cried Roland, suddenly. "No, I do not believe it. Some woman has been walking with some man; and the bridge vultures, eager to swoop upon my poor innocent dove, mistook it that the woman is Isabel Gilbert. I will not believe this story."

"So be it, then," answered Raymond. "In that case we can do nothing."

But Roland was not so easily satisfied. The poisoned arrow had entered far into his soul, and he needed drag the cruel barb back to the wound.

"Not till you have given me some of your authority," he said.

"Pshaw! my dear Roland, I have already told you that I have no authority."

"All right," said Roland, "but I have heard of other towns having elect lights, geese circle all night long, illuminated mist, often seen as to be in reach of the hand, and a bar of geese were seen."

An old hunter had told him of a night wild geese in the sky.

WILD GEESE DRAWN BY

Birds said to Mistake Bridge for Water.

A "norther" in Oklahoma a two ago brought with it a her of wild geese and ducks. At and other towns having elect lights geese circle all night
